

Danske Commodities appoints Kristian Majland as new Chief Information Officer

Energy trading company Danske Commodities has today announced the appointment of Kristian Majland as its new Chief Information Officer (CIO) and VP, Head of Technology.

Kristian Majland, formerly heading IT at Centrica Energy, joins Danske Commodities with a wealth of experience in leveraging technology to drive strategic growth within energy trading organisations.

"Bringing Kristian Majland on board is an important strategic move for us," said Helle Østergaard Kristiansen, CEO of Danske Commodities. "Kristian has a deep knowledge of the energy trading sector and a keen understanding of the vital role technology plays in advancing companies in the energy trading sector."

Kristian Majland expressed his excitement about joining Danske Commodities: "I am very pleased to get the opportunity to join Danske Commodities. The transformation towards a greener and more sustainable future is an important topic for me. Danske Commodities is supporting this transformation with its ambitious strategy for the coming years. In Technology, we will focus on delivering a world class technical platform to support all business areas."

Danske Commodities' Technology organisation consists of 180 dedicated specialists covering business-critical areas like software development, data engineering, automation, IT security, systems and operations.

Kristian Majland officially assumed his role as CIO at Danske Commodities on November 1, 2023.
