When should we check raise as the preflop raiser? 19:08

- A. Important note is that the higher level that you play the more players are going to understand how textures interact with your preflop opening ranges and configuration.
- B. The smaller stakes or more recreational the game the harder it is going to be to simply move players off of hands that remain top pair such as on a board of AKx
 1. Large hands that unblock top pair such as bottom and middle set and overpairs
 - Want to do this on boards that might contain a single high card like K72, Q54. KQx QJx can be a bit tricky if players are playing a lot of offsuit broadways. Can also expand to top set on very draw heavy board where action is expected.
 2. Huge draws that have massive amounts of equity both headsup or multiway, and the more dynamic the better.
 - Raise 9Tdd from MP1 CO and btn call. Flop comes out 7d 8d 2c. This hand can be barreled but also could be check raised. Watch you preflop position when making a play like this aware player know that they have a nut advantage
 3. Weaker draws that are checked multiway that can be squeezed when you pick up on weak sizing and flat callers
 - A5hh on Qh 9c 4h from up front. After checking multiway someone in MP bets small and gets several callers you decide to check raise.
 4. Extreme multi-bet preflop scenarios leading to small SPR post flop spots.
 - MP opens CO 3! and we 4! with AA, CO calls leaving 1 SPR. Board comes out 922r. Instead of betting we check raise all-in allowing out opponent to commit themselves.
