ARTISANS OF DEVIZES FORMATION

Formation is made using waste material that would otherwise be disposed of by the stone industry, from powder to chips of marble, granite, and limestone. Available in a range of colours and shapes, from soft pastel tones to bold, rich greens and blues, Formation is suitable for walls and floors, both indoors and out. Its versatility means that it can look both gentle and natural, or contemporary and bold. With so many layout options, there is bound to be something that will suit your project. Naturally does it bring style, but it brings sustainability too.

1. HECTOR FINCH ESAGONO WALL LIGHT

Designed by LA based Italian architect and designer, Davide Casaroli, the Esagono Wall Light is a contemporary monumental design composed of a foiled brass wall plate onto which are mounted nine plate glass 'fins'. These are backlit by LEDs mounted immediately behind the glass to produce a brilliantly illuminated scone that can be installed horizontally or vertically. This fitting could be used equally effectively in a hotel lobby or corridor as in a bathroom and is a unique piece that can also be used as a ceiling fixture.

2. CURIOUSA ELEMENTAL

Curiosa, the award-winning British lighting studio, unveils its new Elemental lighting collection, featuring two elegant pendants: Neptune and Venus. This collection emphasizes tranquility and simplicity through diffused glass designs that celebrate the beauty of handcrafted, free-blown glass. With a focus on natural harmony, Neptune and Venus are perfect for creating serene atmospheres in various settings. The pieces can be displayed individually or grouped with Lozenge Squirrel and Lozenge Wave pendants to make a striking visual impact. Designer Esther Patterson highlights the collection's embrace of elemental beauty, light, form, and material.

3. CAMERON DESIGN HOUSE KORU

Cameron Design House, the acclaimed British lighting and furniture studio, unveils its latest creation: Koru. Inspired by founder Ian Cameron's Finnish heritage, Koru—meaning 'jewel'—is a bespoke chandelier featuring hand-carved alabaster links, each illuminated to showcase the material's organic beauty. Blending precision engineering with modern craftsmanship, the Koru chandelier is customizable in length, configuration, and finishes. Handmade in their Hertfordshire workshop, this elegant piece marks the studio's first use of alabaster, reflecting their dedication to quality, innovation, and striking design.
