

Airside Liability Insurance

What is it?

Airside liability insurance provides cover in the event of your business dealings taking place beyond passport control and customs at an airport.

Who needs it?

Standard public liability and vehicle insurance policies do not cover you whilst you are airside or may provide only limited cover compared to the potential risk.

If you are going airside, as a result of your work, you need airside insurance. Many airport operators now require contractors to have this or are increasing existing insurance limits. Typically the airport will require limits of £30m and beyond.

What does it cover?

- Third party motor vehicle property damage and/or bodily injury
- Third party general public and property liability

Cover is not limited to the UK, but your business does need to be registered in the UK. Although cover does not extend to North America or Canada, we can arrange a bespoke policy to meet your needs.

Cover can be arranged from £1m to £100m for as little as 24 hours, through to annual cover if you go airside on a regular basis.

Exclusions apply, including:

- Losses from war and associated perils
- Asbestos
- Noise and pollution
- Radioactive contamination
- Products liability
- Claims covered under the UK Road Traffic Act
- Incidents covered by your Employers Liability insurance policy

What does having Airside Liability Insurance mean to you?

Having cover whilst airside means that you can do business there and protect your company at the same time.
